Dr. John A. Kenny, of 68 East Thirteenth street, was appointed veterinary surgeon to succeed Dr. Hamili, and still retains the position.

Prof. Hamili was asked by an "Evening World" reporter to give his opinion as to the present condition of horses in the Department. He said:

"At the present time I do not think the average of the horses in the Department is as good as three or four year ago. Every day I see these ash-cart horses on the street, and I tell you trankly I would not accept many of them as sound animals. I see on the street many cart horses from the Department stables not over 1,300 pounds in weight while the specimentions call for 1,550 pounds.
